Table of Contents

Preface — XIII

Abbreviations, Languages — XVII

Abbreviations, Linguistic Terms — XIX

Chapter 1
Introduction
Defining nominal apposition and motivating its study — 1
1.1 Defining the topic: what does nominal apposition in Indo-European entail? — 5
1.2 Nominal apposition and hierarchy — 17
1.3 Appositive accusatives and scelus viri ‘a scoundrel of a man’ — 26
1.4 Organization of this study — 29

Chapter 2
Nominal apposition and noun classification — 34
2.1 Classification of nouns — 35
2.1.1 Class systems: noun-class languages and gender languages — 39
2.1.2 Classifier systems: classifier languages — 42
2.1.3 Languages with measure and class terms — 46
2.1.4 Classifier languages as opposed to languages with measure/class terms — 47
2.2 Noun classification and semantic function — 47
2.3 Noun classification and language system — 52
2.4 Noun classification in the languages of the world: preliminary conclusions — 54
2.5 Noun classification in Indo-European — 55
2.5.1 Noun classification: gender — 55
2.5.2 Noun classification: classificatory verbs — 57
2.6 Conclusions: how does nominal apposition relate to noun classification? — 59

Chapter 3
Earliest instances of nominal apposition in Indo-European — 62
3.1 Language, culture, archaeology, and writing — 63
3.2 Classifying nouns and early (Indo-European) writing systems — 65
3.2.1 Script determinatives in Sumerian writing — 67
3.2.2 Script determinatives and the Hittite writing system — 74
3.2.3 Script determinatives and Linear B — 80
3.2.4 Script determinatives in Sumerian, Hittite, and Mycenaean — 86
3.3 Script determinatives and nominal apposition in early Indo-European — 88

Chapter 4
Nominal apposition in early Indo-European
Functions and forms — 90
4.1 Nominal apposition in Hittite — 91
4.1.1 Appositive Noun + Noun combinations — 92
4.1.2 Script determinatives in combination with a nominal element — 97
4.1.2.1 Script determinatives in combination with a common noun — 97
4.1.2.2 Script determinatives in combination with a nominalised adjective — 98
4.1.3 Concluding remarks about Hittite — 99
4.2 Nominal apposition in Sanskrit — 99
4.2.1 Proper Noun + Common Noun — 99
4.2.2 Common Noun + Common Noun — 102
4.2.3 Proper Noun + Proper Noun & Common Noun + Common Noun — 104
4.2.4 Quantitative expressions — 105
4.2.5 Concluding remarks about Sanskrit — 106
4.3 Nominal apposition in Greek — 106
4.3.1 Mycenaean Greek — 107
4.3.2 Post-Mycenaean Greek — 109
4.3.2.1 Nominal apposition: Proper Noun + Common Noun — 110
4.3.2.2 Nominal apposition: Common Noun + Common Noun — 118
4.3.2.3 Quantitative expressions — 123
4.3.2.4 Alternatives to nominal apposition — 124
4.3.3 Concluding remarks about Greek — 126
4.4 Nominal apposition in Germanic — 127
4.4.1 Gothic — 127
4.4.2 Old Norse — 130
4.4.3 Old and Middle English — 135
4.4.4 Old Saxon — 138
4.4.5 Old High German — 139
4.4.6 Concluding remarks about Germanic — 144
4.5 Nominal apposition in early Italic — 145
4.5.1 Oscan and Umbrian — 145
4.5.2 Early Latin — 148
4.5.2.1 Early Latin: Plautus — 149
4.5.2.2 Early Latin: Terence — 154
4.5.2.3 Early Latin: Cato — 157
4.5.3 Concluding remarks about Italic — 159
4.6 Structural patterns in nominal apposition in Indo-European — 160
4.7 Conclusions: types of nominal apposition in Indo-European — 166
4.7.1 Overview of results and findings — 167
4.7.2 Characteristics of nominal apposition in early Indo-European — 168
4.7.3 Nominal apposition, script determinatives, and noun classification — 170
4.7.4 A diachronic perspective — 171

Chapter 5
Evolution of nominal apposition in Latin-Romance — 174
5.1 Occurrence and change in Latin-Romance — 175
5.1.1 Individual authors: Classical Latin — 175
5.1.2 Individual authors: Vulgar and Late Latin — 189
5.1.3 Individual authors: Old French — 213
5.1.4 Occurrence of nominal apposition: a diachronic perspective — 217
5.1.4.1 Occurrence, semantics fields, lexical and pragmatic motivation — 217
5.1.4.2 Nominal apposition in Romance today — 219
5.2 Nominal apposition and the semantic field of [RELIGION] — 223
5.2.1 Etymology of Iupiter — 224
5.2.2 Proper Noun + Proper Noun — 226
5.2.3 Proper Noun + Common Noun — 226
5.2.4 Common Noun + Common Noun — 231
5.2.5 Christian times and concluding remarks — 232
5.3 Grammatical context and change in Latin-Romance — 233
5.3.1 External agreement in nominal apposition — 234
5.3.2 Internal agreement in nominal apposition — 238
5.3.2.1 Genitive instead of nominal apposition — 239
5.3.2.2 Spread of the nominative and phonetic identity — 265
5.3.3 Nominal apposition and word order change — 269
5.3.4 Nominal apposition and other changes — 273
5.3.5 Grammatical context in Latin-Romance: a diachronic perspective 281
5.4 Conclusions: the evolution of nominal apposition at phrase level 285

Chapter 6
Nominal apposition and word formation 288
6.1 Composition in Indo-European 291
6.1.1 Determinative compounds 294
6.1.1.1 Structural classification: dependent vs. descriptive determinatives 294
6.1.1.2 Referential differences: endocentric vs. exocentric compounds 300
6.1.2 Copulative compounds 301
6.1.3 Numerals 302
6.1.4 A third type of compound? Compounds based on apposition 304
6.2 Appositive compounds in Sanskrit 307
6.2.1 Dvandvas and “dvandvas” in Sanskrit 308
6.2.2 Other types of appositive compound in Sanskrit 313
6.3 Appositive compounds in Hittite 314
6.3.1 Dvandvas and additional compounds in Hittite 315
6.3.2 Type-of compounds in Hittite 318
6.3.3 Appositive compounds including script determinatives in Hittite 318
6.3.4 Conclusions: appositive compounds in Hittite 323
6.4 Appositive compounds in Greek 323
6.4.1 Dvandvas, additional compounds, and hybrids in Greek 323
6.4.2 Other appositive compounds in Greek 327
6.4.3 Conclusions: appositive compounds in Greek 328
6.5 Appositive compounds in Germanic 328
6.5.1 Dvandvas and hybrids in Germanic 329
6.5.2 Type-of compounds in Germanic 332
6.5.2.1 Type-of compounds specifying [AGE] and [SEX] 332
6.5.2.2 Type-of compounds conveying generic specification 334
6.5.2.3 Other type-of compounds 337
6.5.3 Conclusions: appositive compounds in Germanic 337
6.6 Appositive compounds in other Indo-European languages 338
6.6.1 Appositive compounds in Avestan, Old Persian, Slavic, Classical Armenian, and Albanian 338
6.6.2 Conclusions: appositive compounds in other Indo-European languages — 341

6.7 Word formation on the basis of apposition in Latin-Romance — 341

6.7.1 Compounding in Latin-Romance: general background — 341

6.7.2 Appositive word formation in Latin — 344

6.7.2.1 Elliptic plurals — 345

6.7.2.2 Appositive compound word groups — 347

6.7.2.3 Appositive compounds — 353

6.7.3 Word formation processes based on apposition: Romance — 356

6.7.3.1 Appositive compounds in Romance: hybrids and type-of compounds — 356

6.7.3.2 Recent [Noun + Noun] combinations in Romance — 364

6.7.4 Conclusions: appositive compounds in Latin-Romance — 367

6.8 Conclusions: nominal apposition and word formation — 368

Chapter 7
Conclusions
The changing system of nominal apposition in Indo-European — 372

7.1 Nominal apposition and noun classification — 375

7.2 Nominal apposition and script determinatives — 376

7.3 Nominal apposition in Indo-European and proper nouns — 377

7.4 The evolution of nominal apposition in Indo-European — 378

7.5 Nominal apposition, genitives, and adjectives — 380

References — 382

Appendix — 397

Subject Index — 401